

'God's work' leads man to lost family

BY D.C. HARVILL

Mariano Perez had not seen his children in 14 years.

So when a prisoner who had just been sentenced to 20 years in prison told him, he would find his children when he got out, Perez had little hope of seeing his long-lost relatives soon.

But now, due to an unforeseen twist of fate, Perez, his son and two daughters have been reunited.

Perez, a house painter and minister, had been counseling Cuban detainees housed in the Hancock County Justice Facility when the prisoner told him "If your children are in Florida, I will turn the state upside down to find them when I get out," Perez said.

Shortly after the prisoner was sentenced, Perez was called upon to counsel the man's son, who had come from Florida to visit his father.

"The whole time I was counseling him he just kept looking at me," Perez said.

Perez did not see the son again after the counseling session, but three days later he received a phone call from the prisoners' wife.

"She told me not to get upset, but she might know where my children are. She asked me if my son's name was Mariano and I told her 'yes'."

When the women asked if his son's middle name was also Reuben, Perez could not contain himself, asking for his son's phone number.

What neither Perez nor the prisoner had known was that the prisoner's and Perez's sons worked together in Florida.

Buy-out rumor proves 'absolutely not true'

BY DENA BISNETTE

John C. Stennis Space Center officials say there is no truth to the rumor that the government plans to extend the center's buffer zone by purchasing land in Pearlington.

Mack Herring, public affairs director, said the rumor has surfaced periodically over the past several years and is "absolutely not true."

"We have no plans to expand any of our holdings," he stated after checking with other officials in the space center's organization.

He said the fee area, the section owned outright by the U.S. government, presently consists of 13,480 acres with an acoustical buffer zone of 125,828 acres.

He explained that the land originally acquired for the Mississippi Test Facility which is what the space center was called at the time, included enough room for future development.

"We were not just looking at the Saturn booster when this land was acquired in the 1960s, but at the program we have now and future programs," Herring said.

He added that he checked with other officials because he had received several calls from people about the rumor. Herring said those who called were reliable people rather than "the kind who get hysterical over every little thing they hear."

Herring could not offer an explanation for why the rumor has surfaced again, but does not think it is related to opposition to the Advanced Solid Rocket Motor testing program because spreading such a misconception would not benefit either the proponents or opponents of that project.

He also said he had not heard any comments related to buy-outs in Pearlington at any public meetings on the ASRM issue.

However, he added that Pearlington is closest to the old communities which were bought out when the buffer zone was created and that many residents of what was Logtown moved into the Pearlington area after their land became part of the zone.

The rumor could be related to that proximity, Herring said.

"In our planning, there is nothing which would make us do that," Herring added, "and our planning takes us at least into the 1990s."

MSU president stands behind NASA

BY JANET MCQUEEN

Support of NASA's Advanced Solid Rocket Motor testing project at John C. Stennis Space Center was affirmed at a Thursday press conference by Mississippi State University President Donald Zacharias.

Zacharias and Dr. Ralph E. Powe, MSU vice president for research, also used the occasion to separate the university's position from that of two of their employees at the MSU research center located at SSC.

Employees Dr. Robert Esher and Dwight Bradshaw have been among the most outspoken critics of the testing project. They have appeared before various governmental and civic groups pointing out adverse affects that may occur following the testing in surrounding areas.

"Mississippi State University takes its scientific role seriously. We are concerned about our (scientific) reputation," said Zacharias. "Anyone who wants to make a claim must submit it to our panel of scientists and our response will come from that panel."

Controversy centers around the release of by-products of the ASRM testing, including hydrogen chloride and aluminum oxide, which NASA assures will fall within environmentally safe levels and Esher feels will translate into acid rain and a greater potential for contracting Alzheimer's disease through increased inhalation of aluminum oxide.

Esher, in an Oct. 12 meeting of Concerned Citizens for a Healthy Environment, told the group: "Absolutely no reputable scientist supports NASA," a stand MSU steadfastly opposes.

"Several months ago, one of our staff members in the MSU—Page 3A

On May 1, 1989, the Task Force implemented the Pierre the Pelican program, an information source for expectant parents and parents of children under age six.

The Retired Senior Volunteer Program, RSVP, also an agency of the United Way of Hancock County, is assisting in the Pierre the Pelican program by compiling mailing lists. RSVP is in charge of all of the mailouts.

An expectant parent receives a free monthly newsletter until their child reaches age one and then quarterly until age six.

Lagasse, RSVP director reported, some 125 already receive the free publications.

Parents to be, or parents of children under age six can be placed on the mailing list by calling Pierre the Pelican at 467-9081 extension 2330, or by mailing in a request from displays placed throughout the county.

Task Force members also assisted the Extension Service with the recent town summit meeting, entitled 'Making the Grade, A Report Card on American Youth'.

Polozola stated, "The Task Force now has a resource and information library on many of the pressing issues of youth and is ready to lend assistance to any group or organization. This includes films, information booklets, and knowledgeable speakers."

"There will be, from time to time, the free showing of films dealing with parent and youth concerns of the community," Polozola added.

Dr. Bertin Chevis, MD, a task force member, in addition to Polozola, has been guest speaker to several junior high classes and have shown some of the films the organization has available.

The duo also will be doing some radio talk shows on teen pregnancy.

Task force members in attendance at Tuesday's meeting were, Janet Polozola, chairman; JoAnne Lagasse, co-chairman; Ellis Cuevas, co-chairman; Michael Haas Sr., Hancock County Youth Court judge; Jim Goss, Waveland Police department; and Dr. Nathan Barber, pastor First Baptist Church, Bay St. Louis.

Persons interested in more information can call Polozola at 467-9081, extion 2330.

NASA leaders defend ASRM project's safety

BY JANET MCQUEEN

Stennis Space Center Director Roy Estess reported plans for the testing of Advanced Solid Rocket Motors at the Hancock County facility are progressing on schedule, despite opposition from a group of local citizens.

"Funds have been allocated to Stennis to develop support facilities, and we have begun to hire engineers," he said at a Thursday press conference. "The Senate voted 84-6 to proceed on the ASRM project and the overall NASA budget has been approved."

He expressed regret some individuals have become "overly concerned due to lack of information or misinformation."

"We will not fire the ASRM until conditions are right for a safe, sound test. We will more than meet the environmental requirements."

Responding to the long-term effects of the testing, Estess said no documented evidence of environmental damage has been noted since NASA began using solid propellants in 1964. "There has been no apparent degradation of the environment at any test site and certainly no reports of damage to health," said SSC Deputy Director Gerald Smith.

Citing Kennedy Space Center in Florida as an example, he said with their vast launch experience, including 31 space shuttle flights, "if testing were a threat to human health, we would certainly have seen it by now."

According to Estess, the ASRM project at Stennis will probably not continue for 30 NASA—Page 3A

Gadget isn't for me

I've been reading about some of the new gadgets people are marketing these days.
Last week, somebody had invented some kind of alarm that lets a guy know if he's left the toilet seat up, then automatically lowers it for him.
Now hang on. Just why would somebody want to invent that? And furthermore, why could anybody possibly want to buy one?
On further reading of the marketing description, it sounds like I actually need one of these things in my house, but I'm beginning to think inventors are going to ridiculous extremes to come up with something new.
The gadget sounds great, like anything in a marketing announcement does. It's supposed to make matters more convenient for the women of the household in which the guy who buys this thing lives. It's also supposed to discourage pets from playing in the bowl and from drinking water that might be laced with chemical cleaners.
Now, I have a cat who does like to stand on the toilet seat in the morning and meow, but I'm not sure if the critter is trying to get my attention or trying to potty train himself. I've never seen him drink the water from the bowl, but he might try.
I also have two dogs who might try to drink the water, but you still won't catch me buying this new product.

The first thing is, I have a husband in the house. Now, why would I want to embarrass this poor man by sounding an alarm every time he happens to forget to lower the toilet seat? I mean, if the device is going to lower the seat anyway, why bother with an alarm?
If only the seat lowers, how is it supposed to discourage my pets from drinking the water? It may make it harder for the dogs to get their heads in the bowl, but what the little gadget ought to do is shut the lid, not lower the seat.
What do we need with such gadgets anyway? If a person does something like shut his toilet lid before leaving the house every day for a couple of weeks, he won't have to think about it any longer. It will become a habit, and he'll just do it.

It's like hanging your keys on the same nail next to the same door for as long as you live in the same house, or putting your glasses on the same nightstand every night so you can find them in the morning.
Instead, we have key-finding devices which go "beep, beep, beep" and straps so we can hang our eyeglasses around our necks when we aren't using them—and brand new, just-in-time-for-Christmas toilet seat lowering alarms.
It seems to be a human compulsion to form habits, so we form bad ones instead—like visiting the snack machine at the office when we get bored, or drinking sugared beverages laced with caffeine.
With enough little devices like the toilet seat thing, what else do we have left to do?
It makes me think of all these people with remote controls on their TVs.

These are the same people who complain that their kids are getting lazy and overweight, and I have a theory that this is related to remote controls.
You see, my dad had a remote control for his TV long before we got an electronic one. Actually, he had four of these wondrous little devices. They were called kids.
Today's kids don't get the exercise they used to get because they don't have to get up to change the channel or to get the cat out of the bathroom because he's trying to drink the water from the toilet bowl, or possibly visit the outhouse.
If one of them even saw a TV with dials on it, he'd think he was in an antique shop. And, he certainly wouldn't understand it when the black-and-white rerun he's watching ends a segment with, "Don't touch that dial! We'll be right back." What's a dial? Phones don't even have them these days.
And now these little folks won't even have to lower their own toilet seats.
The guy who invented this will probably get rich off the holiday sales with his toilet lowering device. If he's lucky, he'll do as well as the fellow who invented the TV remote control.
But I still don't think I'll buy one. If I did, when would I talk to my cat?

Bay man arrested, charged in shooting

BY DENA BISNETTE
A Bay St. Louis man has been arrested in connection with a Saturday morning shooting.
According to Bay St. Louis Police Detective Tom Burleson, Troy Saucier, 26, of Apt. 27, Sycamore St., has been charged with aggravated assault in connection with the 4 a.m. incident, which occurred Nov. 4 at the MCM Club on Sycamore and St. Francis.
Burleson said Saucier allegedly entered the building and opened fire on John Jackson Jr. of Gulfport. Saucier had apparently gone to the club to settle an earlier altercation.

One bullet struck Jackson in the left side of the back. He was taken to Hancock Medical Center, where he was awaiting surgery for removal of the bullet Saturday morning.
Authorities found Saucier at the hospital where he had gone for treatment of injuries suffered in the earlier altercation, Burleson said. Arresting officers included Burleson and Joe Kepfer, who were assisted by Cpl. Dave Parker and Officer Gus Aime.
Saucier was booked into the Hancock County Jail Saturday morning with bond set at $25,000.

Stennis to conduct NASA's first history workshop

The John C. Stennis Space Center will offer a one-of-a-kind workshop for history teachers Nov. 9 at the Hancock County-based facility. In fact, this is a first for NASA nationwide, according to Mack Herring, Stennis public affairs officer.
"We've never geared any of our aerospace workshops toward history teachers as a group. This session really puts a creative twist on some very old subjects—space and the universe. And, I believe any educator who participates will get excited about the teaching possibilities of passing this information on to their students," Herring added.
The workshop is sponsored by the Stennis Teacher Resource Center and is open to any junior or senior high school history teacher. Registration for the workshop begins at 8:15 a.m. The session will run from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m.
Herring, a NASA employee of nearly 29 years, will lead off the day's activities by chronicling the by-gone era of Apollo.
Pan Am's Wardell Burnette will follow Herring on the agenda as one of the original SSC employees who took part in the construction project. A photo of Burnette standing behind a mule and plow has been placed permanently in the Stennis archives as a vital historic reminder of that mammoth effort.
Tom Sever, NASA's archaeologist, will be the headline speaker for the day. Sever is known nationally and internationally for his use of NASA's remote sensing technology in archaeology.

In addition Pan Am's Dr. Marco Giardino, also an archaeologist, will discuss the history of South Mississippi and Louisiana and the archaeological significance associated with these areas.
The day will be wrapped up with lectures by SSC's Dr. Jerry Brown and Jim McMurtry, who will give the history of spaceflight and the universe, respectively. Both men are aerospace education lecturers who represent NASA and the Stennis Space Center both on the local and national levels.
For further information, or to reserve a place in the workshop, contact the Teacher Resource Center at (601) 688-3338.

went back to Florida, he told my son 'there is a man in Mississippi who looks exactly like you,' Perez said.

Perez wasted no time making contact with his newly found family and he could not have imagined a more ecstatic reception.

"When I called my son (17-year-old Mariano) and told him who I was, he dropped the phone and started hollering. I've found my dad, I've found my dad," Perez said.

"When my mother called and said 'your dad is on the phone,' I said 'No momma, get out of here,' Perez's 21-year-old daughter Adah Comacho said.

Perez's younger daughter, Miriam, 19, was at work when her sister told her over the phone that their father had been found.

"I was so hysterical I couldn't work the rest of the night; they told me to go home," Miriam said.

Perez credits God with his good fortune.

"I want to give God the glory. If I hadn't been doing God's work, I never would have found them," Perez said.

The story of how Perez and his children became separated is one of family tragedy.

The Perezs had been living in Kentucky when his wife, suffering from a mental disorder, had to be hospitalized.

"When she got out she didn't know me; she wanted a divorce," he said.

After the divorce, Perez's wife remarried and took their three children, who had been living with him, and disappeared.

Perez eventually moved to Hancock County, married the former Barbara Hill, and began his life anew. But he could never forget his children.

After Perez located his family he was faced with the hurdle of getting them to Mississippi so they could see each other after being separated for so long.

"Barbara said to let them write a check on their account and before they had a chance to use the tickets, God would put money in the account," Perez said.

Shortly after Perez told his children to write the check, he painted a house and the owner was so pleased with the work, she paid him more than he had asked for the job, he said.

The extra payment more than covered his children's trip to Mississippi, Perez said.

The three were supposed to arrive in Mississippi Oct. 27 but were so eager to see their father they missed their flight.

"We were so excited, my brother forgot his ticket, so we missed the plane," Adah said.

Their second attempt was successful. On Monday Perez was reunited with his children, along with a "bonus", Adah's eight-month-old son, Carlos.

"I ran off the road twice that day. It was like my whole world stopped until I saw them," Perez said.

"We never expected to find him in Mississippi. We thought he was still in Kentucky or Puerto Rico (Perez's birthplace). I had gone to Puerto Rico looking for him," Miriam said.

"I just hope this shows others there is always hope. Whether their children have been stolen or taken away, there is hope that they are out there," Perez said.

Perez's children plan to move to Hancock County where his son will finish school at Hancock North Central, he said.

research center, independent of his university responsibilities, began to express concerns relative to the environmental impact of the ASRM testing program planned by NASA," said Powe.

"While it is not the mission of MSU to interpret or to enforce environmental law, we are certainly concerned with maintaining a safe environment.

"We believe that NASA is a good corporate citizen...The presence of NASA in Mississippi has meant much to the state's economy in the past, and the ASRM will yield significant additional benefits in the future," he said.

He announced the formation of a team of MSU scientists, including a soil scientist with extensive experience in Mississippi soils, a forester whose expertise is air pollutant stresses and tree physiology, two chemists, a biological scientist with experience in medical toxicology and a mechanical engineer who will evaluate the concerns.

They will be joined by scientists from the University of Mississippi, Jackson State University and the University of Southern Mississippi to form a research team to address environmental concerns and the subsequent monitoring program.

According to Dr. Rebecca McCaleb, SSC environmental officer, the team of scientists will visit the testing area within the next few weeks.

years, a time frame cited by critics. The 30-year figure was used in studies as the maximum testing time, and he expects new technology to be in place at an earlier date.

Dr. Rebecca McCaleb, SSC environmental officer, said although the Environmental Protection Agency may remove test by-product aluminum oxide from its toxic list, they will continue to monitor it to operate within acceptable levels.

"We are not going to get a permit and walk away," said Estess, who noted he has lived in the area for 23 years and plans to continue doing so.

According to SSC director of center operations, Jack Rogers, another public hearing will be held later in the year before the EPA permitting procedure is completed, with the final operating permit expected in early 1990.

DA, senator, constable candidates need votes

Three very important races are on Tuesday's special election with polls being open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. A district attorney race involves three candidates over a three-county area, Hancock, Harrison and Stone counties.

Seven candidates are seeking the position of state senator. The district involves all but two precincts in Hancock and some precincts in north Harrison and south Jackson counties.

Four persons are seeking the position of constable, East District, and this involves the majority of the qualified electors of Hancock County east of Highway 603.

Persons residing in District Four of Hancock County will also vote on an election commissioner. Jean Dorsey, who was appointed to the position, is unopposed for the slot.

In all probability there will be runoffs in several of the races, yet it is very important for all qualified electors to go to the polls and vote for the candidates of their choice.

Your vote does count, and the candidates of your choice want your vote.

Christmas is fast approaching, and we know there are many folks out there who may deserve a Christmas basket or some youngsters who will be in need for toys.

The Retired Volunteer Program volunteers will be at the Mississippi Employment Office on Monday and Wednesday of this week taking applications for Christmas Baskets and Toys for Tots.

It is my understanding that there have not been too many requests as yet for Christmas baskets.

The Toys for Tots, of course, is the Hancock County Doll and Toy Fund which provides toys for deserving youngsters throughout the county. The Hancock County Doll and Toy Fund is an agency of the United Way of Hancock County.

So, if you know a family you think should receive a Christmas basket, give the name to one of the volunteers either Monday or Wednesday of this week at the Mississippi Employment Office behind the Bay St. Louis Fire Station. The names will then be processed.

Also, if you know of a youngster or youngsters who deserve a Christmas toy, turn their name in too.

I was happy to hear the food drive at area schools, benefiting the Hancock County Food Pantry, was a success.

Mrs. Ina Piazza told me Friday that the food pantry really appreciated the efforts of the school administrators, teachers and students.

Once again Coast Electric Power Association's employees helped by collecting the donated food items from the schools.

The food pantry plays a vital role in Hancock County and is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to noon. It is located at the back of the Hancock County Courthouse in the old jail.

Several area church members volunteer on days the food pantry is open.

Everyone who works at the food pantry or who donates food items to the food pantry should be commended, because it helps hundreds each year at a time of need.

We are at peace and we are prosperous. Our free and democratic system is being emulated by countries all over the world. Poland and Hungary are two of the most recent.

And we've even seen some significant changes in the Soviet Union.

But to me, there is cause for concern. We haven't yet seen enough actions to match the words.

In a recent meeting, I was told that the Soviets have made some 28 proposals to reduce their military. Yet only two percent has actually been reduced. Tanks and missiles are rolling off the assembly line faster, not slower.

Two recent discussions support my theory.

One was with a former general from West Germany, who headed up that country's intelligence and counter-intelligence operations before he retired. And the other was a Soviet poet, Irina Ratushinskaya, who was imprisoned for political reasons. Both of these people viewing the Soviet Union from different perspectives, agreed that Pres. Mikhail Gorbachev is in deep political trouble.

Gen. Paul Albert Scherer warned that this will be the winter of the Soviet Union's discontent. Economic, labor and political problems are already rearing their heads. Strikes are abundant. Food supplies are short. Inflation is surging.

Both predicted that Poland, Hungary and perhaps even East Germany will attempt to pull farther away from the Soviet block, forcing the Kremlin to play its hand. To this point, it has watched from the sidelines, but as the Hungarian Revolution of the mid-1950's taught us, "sitting on the bench" isn't the Soviet style.

But who will be in charge of the Kremlin then? The general and the poet believe Gorbachev will be gone by next summer. True, he is earning points abroad, but at the same time, he is losing support at home.

So, what will happen next? Gorbachev could be replaced by a more moderate leader, though it's hard for me to envision anyone more reform-minded than Gorbachev exists in the Soviet Union. That could lead to greater freedom and democracy and would certainly be looked on favorably by the United States.

At the other end of the political spectrum is the hard-liners, the conservatives, who believe Gorbachev has already loosened the reigns too much. They would favor a crackdown and a return to "the old way" of doing things.

The worst scenario would be a military takeover, not likely but certainly possible.

For now, Gorbachev is still in charge which appears to be in our best interest. Some might argue that for this reason, we should move forward quickly to conclude arms control agreements. But keep in mind that any agreement, while it would restrict the Soviet Union, would also constrain the U.S. This does not mean that we shouldn't pursue arms control agreements. It does mean, in my opinion, that we shouldn't rush to conclusions.

We should proceed with caution. If I've learned one thing in Congress, it is that friends aren't always there when you need them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Press coverage of ASRM controversy is one-sided

Editor,

There has been a lot of press coverage recently about the aluminum oxide (Al₂O₃) and the hydrogen chloride (HCl) that will be released by the solid fuel rocket engine test firings planned at Stennis Space Center.

I work at Stennis and live in Picayune. I do not work for NASA or for any agency or contractor involved in the rocket engine testing project.

The news coverage seems to me to be awfully one sided. In addition, there may be a few folks who play fast and easy with the facts of this matter. Some of the "facts" reported in the press aren't even close to being factual.

The projected exposure to HCl and Al₂O₃ has been blown all out of proportion.

I too have read articles about the suspected link between aluminum concentration in the brain and Alzheimer's disease. Please keep in mind that the cause and effect relationships in this regard have not been established.

Many folks seem to ignore the fact that aluminum is one of the most common elements in soil and we cannot avoid exposure to it. Soils around Stennis run from 100 to 600 parts per million because that makes calculations simple. At that concentration, each acre of soil contains about one ton of aluminum in the top one foot of soil. (Mineral soil weighs about four million pounds per acre foot). This is the amount of aluminum contained in about two tons of aluminum oxide.

However, in many areas of the world, soils contain far more aluminum than that. Normal mineral soils which are commonly used for production of food crops may contain up to 50,000 parts per million of aluminum. Aluminum availability to plants growing in soil depends far more on the pH of the soil than it does on the amount of aluminum present. Organic soils can chemically bind aluminum to make it biologically inactive.

The number of test firings planned in this project will have no significant effect on plants or soils growing in this area. This is apparent from the fact that even the worst case situation will not bring the aluminum level in the soil up to that found in normal soils in other parts of the country. If because of an accidental spill, an area is contaminated with aluminum beyond the ability of that spot of soil to assimilate it, clean-up is relatively easy and non-hazardous.

As for human health effects: A person who eats food cooked in aluminum cookware, drinks carbonated soft drinks or beer from aluminum cans, takes Vanquish for headaches, and Pepto Bismol for upset stomach will get more aluminum into his body from those sources than he will from the rocket engine tests planned here at Stennis.

HCl when combined with water forms hydrochloric acid. This is the same acid which is found in the human stomach and in the stomachs of most animals. The concentration of acid found in the normal human stomach is many times greater than even the worst case situation will produce in the environment as a result of the rocket engine test firings.

All of this is not intended to indicate that environmental degradation should not be a serious consideration. It certainly should be. However I am trying to point out that things should be kept in perspective.

I applaud genuine concern for the God given natural resources upon which we all depend for our food, air, water and well being.

However, I also applaud those who have brought our nation so far in the space program. NASA has been and continues to be a good neighbor and an environmentally sensitive agency.

NASA has the world's leading authorities in space technology. They also have leading authorities in environmental sciences. These folks who are trusted to conduct our multi-billion dollar space program, can also be trusted to protect the natural environment in which they and their families live.

Yours truly,
Kenneth R. Blain

Key Club members commended

To the Editor:

Parents and Professionals of Exceptional Children would like the community to know about the wonderful teenagers in the St. Stanislaus Key Club under the direction of Brother John Hotstream.

On Halloween night, these teenagers arranged a Halloween dance with Fantasy D. J. supplying music for these special children and adults.

The Key Club had decorated the hall, supplied refreshments, danced with their guests and took special interest to make sure everyone had a good time. After the dance, they also took on the responsibility of cleaning up.

I am always very impressed with their eagerness to help us organize activities. Mickey Lagasse has many times attended our organizational meetings to give us suggestions and offer assistance.

Our community is fortunate to have such an outstanding group of teenagers in our area.

THE PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

From the Mississippi
Economic Council

Mississippi may be overlooking a simple way to improve its economy.

According to an editorial published recently in the Northeast Mississippi Daily Journal, of the millions of federal dollars spent by Mississippi businesses and government agencies, only 8 percent of those dollars is spent with other Mississippi businesses.

For example, if an industry in Mississippi received a government contract to build picnic tables, as it stands today, 92 percent of the money used to purchase the needed wood, screws, and paint would be spent with a supplier outside the state.

Of course, if the only means of getting the needed materials is from an out-of-state supplier, we have no qualms.

But we have qualms.

Think about it—92 percent? That is business and money and tax dollars that could stay right here in Mississippi. We are foolish if we allow this situation to go unaddressed.

Careful thought should go into developing a solid progressive solution. It should steer clear of protectionism. (Remember, we're a state which relies heavily on exporting.)

There is one small step business and industry could immediately take. They could immediately develop a written policy stating that when a Mississippi supplier can provide the same product and match the same service, quality, and cost criteria of an out-of-state supplier, the business or industry will purchase its product from the Mississippi supplier.

This is one area where the state can immediately improve.

Hawks close season with win, beat Harrison Central 9-0

Special to the Echo
By Monica Malley

The long overdue gridiron battle between 15th-ranked District VIII-4A champs Hancock North Central and the District VIII-5A champs Harrison Central turned into a defensive battle Friday, with the HNC Hawks shutting out the HC Rebels for a hard-fought 9-0 victory.

The first quarter began with the Rebels winning the toss and electing to receive, but the Hawks did not make it easy for them, with Terrence Goff driving the kick-off deep into the endzone.

The HC Rebels came off the line fast and hard, gaining 10-20 yards on each play, edging their way to the Hawks 49-yardline where the Hawk defense held fast, giving them no alternative but to punt. The Hawks took possession on the 17 yardline. Quarterback Casey Davis completed a 22-yard sideline pass to Goff, earning the offense their first down. HNC's Clifton Carter brought the Rebels offense to a close in the first quarter when he intercepted a long pass intended for the Rebel receiver.

Second quarter action was much like the first quarter until Davis intercepted a pass, turning the second quarter around. On the Hawks second possession with second and 10 to go, Davis completed a pass to Rick Boyet, dodging his way through the Rebel defense for a 44-yard touchdown with 3:55 remaining in the first half.

The extra point was no good, making the score 6-0.

A 15-yard penalty against the Hawks put the Rebels within field goal range, but a failed attempt ended the half with 6-0.

The third quarter opened with the Hawks receiving and Carter returning the kick-off for 15 yards. Davis and Boyet got it together, bringing the ball close to first down twice in a row with Goff carrying the ball across the marker.

Jerom Vince received a pass from Davis for 25 yards, picking up another first down. Goff added eight more yards, placing them in field goal range.

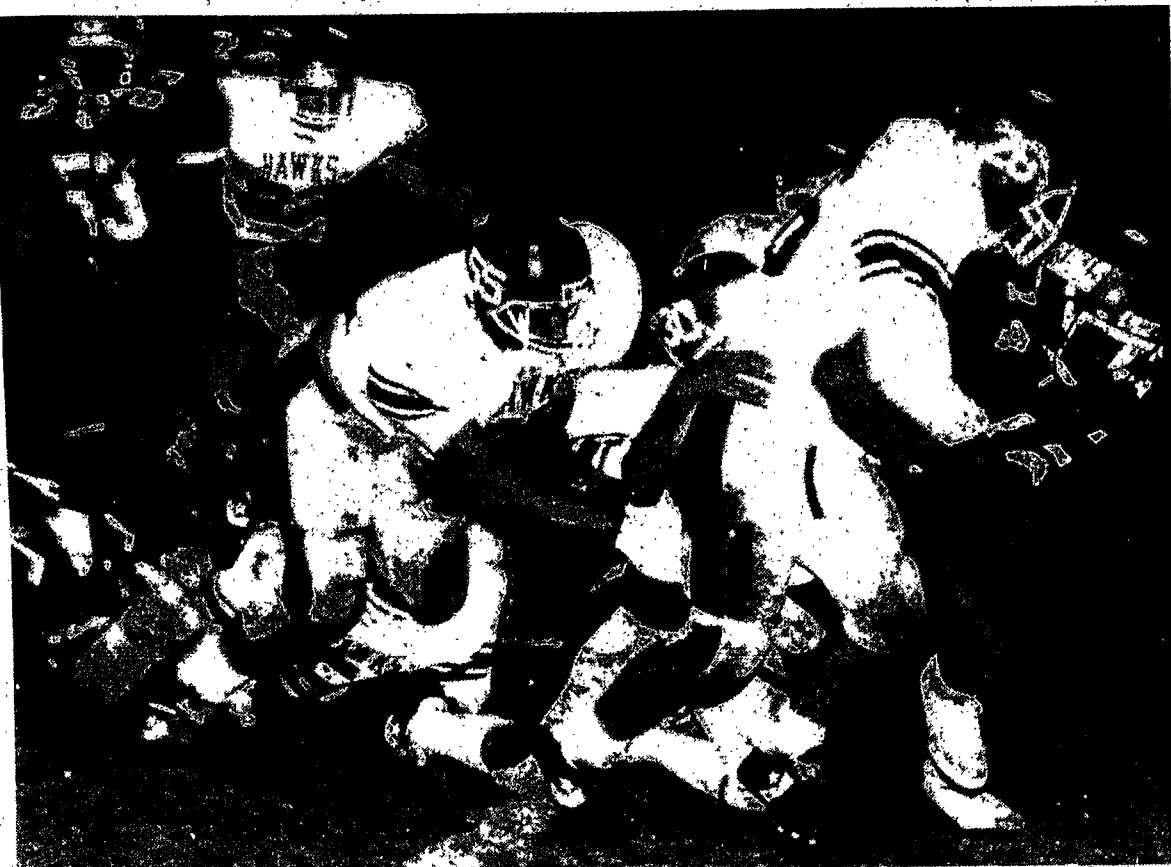

Jose Santos kicked a 13-yard field goal, making the score 9-0 with 7:53 remaining in the third quarter.

The fourth left the Rebels hopeless as Regan Ladner picked off three consecutive passes, returning the third interception for 20 yards.

The Hawks' defense was the key to victory Friday night. On three separate plays, the HNC defense stopped the Rebels from gaining a first down with less than a yard to go.

The offense was lead by Goff with 18 rushes for 75 yards and six receptions for 89 yards. Boyet added to the offense with three receptions for 60 yards scoring the only touchdown of the night.

Next Friday night, HNC hosts their first district play-off game against Laurel. Kick-off will be at 7:30 p.m.

Juniors win 36-8

Special to the Echo
By Monica Malley

Monday night, Hancock North Central's junior high football team soared by D'Iberville, 36-8, chalking up another win for their record of 6-1.

Hancock got off to a quick start scoring early in the first quarter when halfback Lance Wedgeworth scored on a 64-yard run.

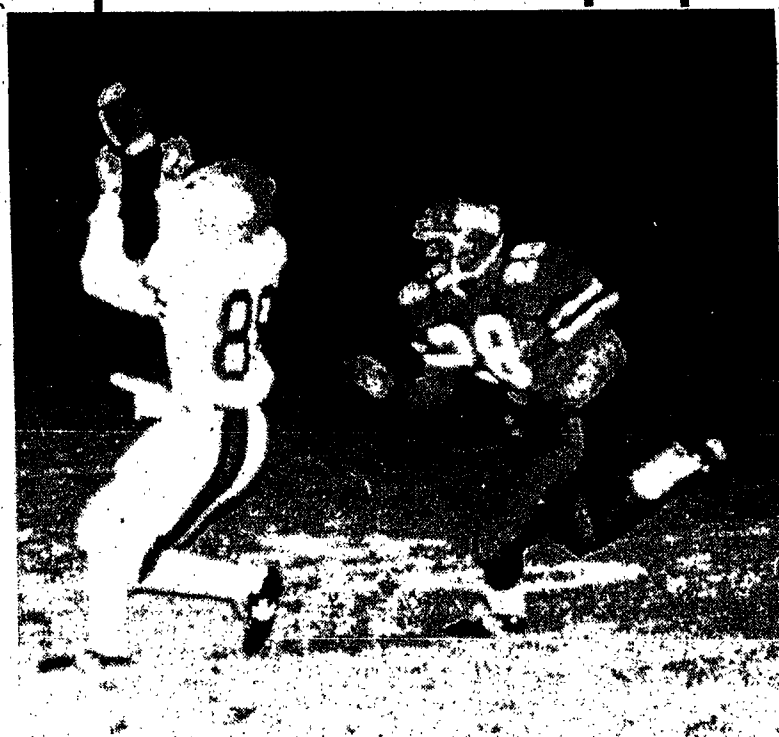

The two-point conversion was good on a pass from quarterback Scotty Davis to Matt Harmon.

Harmon then scored a 12-yard touchdown on a running play. Again, Davis's pass was good, but this time it was to Brian Holbrook, who completed the two-point conversion, ending the first quarter 16-0.

Holbrook scored next on a 15-yard pass by Davis. The two-point conversion by Wedgeworth was good. Then, Kevin Cuevas scored on an 11-yard run for the final touchdown of the first half, ending the half 30-0.

In second half action, Wedgeworth scored again when he ran for a 32-yard touchdown.

It was late in the game before Hancock gave up a touchdown to d'Iberville. The final score of the night was 36-8 after d'Iberville connected on a two-point conversion.

Rocks drop last game, mauled by Wolves 30-22

Special to the Echo
By Tom Ackerman

The St. Stanislaus Rock-A-Chaws closed out their 1989 football season Friday night at home, losing to the St. Paul Wolves of Covington, La., 30-22. The loss put the Rocks at 5-5 for the season.

Although the outcome dashed any possible hopes for a post-season bowl bid, the game had its moments of excitement for the Rocks and their stadium-filling fans.

After being forced into a safety situation late in the first period on a bad snap, giving the Wolves a 2-0 advantage, the Rocks began their offensive drive.

Allowing the Wolves a TD early in the second quarter with 8:42 on the clock, the Rock-A-Chaws' runner Shannon Garrett took the ball on the kickoff, returning it 85 yards for a Rock score some 15 seconds after the Wolves. A two-point conversion pass to Ken Booker put the Rocks back into contention 8-9.

Then late in the third quarter, Booker took a pitchout from Rock quarterback Cedric Smith and powered his way over the top of the defending line to put the Rocks ahead 14 to 9 with 5:31 on the third period clock.

The contest, the Rocks' final home game of the season, was preceded by ceremonies honoring the senior members of the football team as well as those of the band and the senior

Tigers drop final game to Pass Pirates Friday

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Bay High Tigers finished the 1989 season Friday night with a close game against the Pass Christian Pirates, but lost 12-7. The fourth quarter proved scoreless after an attempt at a Tiger field goal sent the ball to the left of the posts.

Bay High finished with an 0-10 record, while Pass Christian finished 4-7 overall and 3-2 in district play.

Pass Christian Pirates, but lost 12-7.

Pass Christian opened the scoring midway through the first quarter when LaShan Ausmer caught a pass from Tracy Watts, combining for a 30-yard touchdown with 7:23 left in the period.

The PAT attempt was no good.

After several turnovers, Bay High worked its way down to a first and goal on the Pirate six. After losing a yard, quarterback Charlie Mitchell dropped back to pass and hit Mac Murphree to tie the score 6-6 with about three minutes left in the half.

Kevin Edwards gave the Tigers a one-point lead with a PAT kick.

Pass Christian rallied to take back the lead after halftime, working down to a first and goal on the Tiger one and handing off to Earl Washington, who pushed the ball across the Bay High line for the six points.

A PAT attempt was no good, posting the final score of 12-7 with 1:10 left in the third.

SHOPPING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire
Caire

It isn't a bit too soon to start planning that Thanksgiving Dinner, is it? And it's time to take advantage of the super-special on self-basting turkeys at Jitney Jungle—in fact, you might want to roast a turkey now, make use of the leftovers, and "stash" one in the freezer for Turkey Day itself.

Or, you might want to cook parts of the bird separately. The wings make a nice sort of mini-roast or turkey stew or what have you. The breast has so many uses, in sandwiches and entrees, and there's lots of meat on the drumsticks—and so on, a boon to the food budget.

Or, if turkey isn't your choice just now, head on over to Delchamps for the "Hog Wild Pork Sale"—and pick up a Boston Butt Pork roast, for instance, or quarter-loin, sliced chops.

National also has a special on Boston Butts, and Jitney Jungle and Winn-Dixie offers pork chops and quarter-loins at most attractive prices as well. When time is short, try:

JUDY MARQUEZ' QUICK PORK CHOP SUPPER

6 pork chops
6 new potatoes
2 large yellow onions, sliced
Pepper, salt to taste
6 squares aluminum foil
Brown the pork chops on both sides, and place one chop on each square of foil. Place one potato and slices of onion atop chop. Fold the foil together until tightly sealed. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

(At other times Judy uses chicken breasts with peach halves and small potatoes—and, chicken breast quarters are specially priced just now at Winn-Dixie and National, by the way!

Or you might pick up one of the three-pound bags of yellow onions on special at Winn-Dixie and use a bit of onion to cook:

BRAISED PORK CHOPS WITH ONIONS

4 pork chops, 3/4-inch thick, pounded lightly
1 egg, beaten
1 Tbsp. grated onion
1 Tbsp. minced parsley
1 tsp. salt, optional
1/4 tsp. freshly ground black pepper
1/2 cup dry bread crumbs
3 Tbsp. butter

Trim the fat from the chops. Mix the egg with the onion, parsley, pepper and salt. Dip the chops in the mixture, then in the bread crumbs, coating well.

Melt the butter in a skillet; saute the chops over low heat until browned on both sides and cooked through. (Four servings).

—from Myra Waldo's Complete Round the World Meat Cookbook

Or, you could use some of those good onions to cook:

STUFFED ONIONS

Select one medium-sized yellow onion per person. Peel and parboil in salted water for 20 minutes. Remove the center portion of each onion, chop very fine and mix with pork sausage or any other seasoned ground meat.

Stuff the onions with the mixture, arrange in a buttered casserole and bake in a 350 degree oven until the meat is done. This makes an easy and thrifty main dish.

With California iceberg lettuce at bargain prices at Winn-Dixie, I'm in the mood for that old favorite, a Greek salad—and here's an extra-easy way for this version of:

GREEK SALAD

Line a salad bowl with the whole outer lettuce leaves of a head of lettuce. Tear the remaining leaves into bite-size pieces and place in the bowl.

Drain the liquid from a jar of marinated artichoke hearts, but reserve the liquid please. Cut the hearts into chunks, and add to the lettuce. Add a bunch of chopped green onions and a small can of pitted black olives (sliced, if you prefer—I like 'em whole for this.) Toss gently with as much as you wish of the reserved liquid from the artichokes, and sprinkle Parmesan cheese and black pepper atop. —from Mandeville High Parent Teacher Student Association Cookbook

With boneless beef chuck roasts and steaks, and boneless beef sholder steaks on special at Jitney Jungle, cook up a pot roast surrounded by potatoes, onions and carrots, either atop the stove or in the oven. Delicious—and thrifty! Serve with some of that long grain rice from Winn-Dixie, perhaps.

And for dessert, mix up a fruit bowl of some of the tasty apples on sale all around, add some Bartlett pears from Winn-Dixie or Bartlett or Bosco pears from Jitney Jungle, oranges and tangerines from Delchamps and whatever else strikes your palate or purse. Chop all into bite size pieces. And, enjoy while saving!

Coast teachers witness launch of space shuttle

BY DEN BISNETTE

Three local women who went to Kennedy Space Center in Florida to see the launch of the space shuttle Atlantis have been able to share what they saw with students.

Cheryl Bennett, a former teacher who now works at the Teacher Resource Center at John C. Stennis Space Center; math teacher Carrie Jones and earth science teacher Cathy Ott tried three times to see the Atlantis launched.

Bennett said a group of Mississippi teachers were invited to watch the launch as part of the "Coast Explorers" program in May and June, but the shuttle launching was rescheduled twice and did not actually take place until Oct. 18.

"Coast Explorers," a public education program which included a number of exhibits, speaker and special projects at the schools in the coastal counties, ended shortly after local schools ended the 1988-89 term, but the teachers' interest in the launch did not end.

a math teacher, Jones could find many ways to use her launch experience as a teaching tool. She joined Ott and the others in Florida the night before the launch took place.

"The thing is, these people stayed geared up all summer long," Bennett said. "They kept calling me, asking me if we were still going to go."

Teaching materials were supplied to those who attended the launch itself as well as a tour of Cape Canaveral and Kennedy Space Center the day before to the launch received teaching materials.

During the tour, the teachers were taken only a mile from where Atlantis stood on its launching pad and other sights, including the space center's vertical assembly building, exploration station, hands-on museum and visitor's center Imax theatre.

The day of the launch, the teachers had what Bennett called "the second-best viewing spot after where they send the astronaut's families."

disturbed about the launch.

"The birds just continued flying around and there was this alligator near us and he just kind of turned his head and watched the shuttle too. He didn't run off or anything," she said.

"It was almost like the shuttle launched and nothing was disturbed."

"You just have to be there. The power of that thing is unreal."

"The ground was vibrating and there was some noise, but I could talk to the person next to me with no problem."

Ott was more impressed with the plume of gases behind the shuttle.

"I had expected the ground to shake and the plume of behind it, but the brightness of it was something I definitely hadn't expected," she said.

Jones' initial reaction was, "Wow!"

"I really don't know how to describe it. It was the most awesome thing I have ever seen."

"The shock waves don't hit until the thing's 50 miles high, but you expect it when it leaves the ground."

All three said the experience of watching a shuttle go up was well worth the wait.

and then there is a present for you."

Ott felt more people should be able to see shuttle launches.

"There were about 300 or 400 people watching at our viewing site, but I feel that in many cases, it's the same people seeing it over and over. I'd like to see the opportunity passed around more," she said.

Ott did a lesson on the satellite Galileo, deployed by the Atlantis, the day she returned. She found her students particularly enthusiastic. Jones, who said the experience is useful to a math teacher because everything about the shuttle is put together with mathematical equations, found her students somewhat blasé but has found that they do understand the concept of elliptical orbits.

Bennett will pass on what she has learned from watching the launch through the teacher resource center.

"Just by sending these teachers to see this and then having them go back into classrooms along the coast and talk about it, we're pioneering here," she said.

"I look to space for our future. There's just so much out there and so much people don't

"I would not trade anything for the experience," Jones said. "The experience was equivalent to being a bad kid and not expecting a Christmas present. You're tempted to go to the tree anyway on Christmas morning and so much people don't understand."

She said while it is important to teach about past space ventures because younger children are likely to believe that there have always been space shuttle launches, the Atlantis, through Galileo, will begin additional teaching materials by 1995 when the satellite begins sending back pictures of Jupiter.

Coast teachers waiting for shuttle launch

Bennett said all except two of the eight teachers attending from the Gulf Coast were elementary school teachers. Ott and Jones are both secondary school teachers.

"It was my fourth trip to the cape," said Bennett, who served as a sort of coordinator for the coast group. "I couldn't believe it; I didn't think it was going to go. I had even started thinking I was the jinx."

After a problem with the shuttle created the initial delay and a new launch date was announced, the teachers went down on a bus to watch the launch, which had been set up for a Tuesday. Weather delayed it, the shuttle failed to go up that Wednesday, and it was several more days before Atlantis got off the ground.

Several teachers went home, unable to stay any longer just as some of the original group had been unable to arrange to go again. As Ott and Jones were doing, they were paying their own way and using personal leave days.

Ott said she and several others stayed. When they ran out of clean clothes, they went to a laundromat. Another group of people overheard them discussing the launch and the delays and introduced themselves; they were teachers from Kentucky staying a few extra days after a seminar so they could see the launch.

Jones was Ott's invited guest for the first trip, but the group had to turn back when the launch was aborted.

"She was the one who showed the most interest," said Ott, adding that she also felt that as "We were at the Banana Creek site, which is only about two-and-a-half miles away. When it went off, you couldn't hold them down," Bennett said of the teachers.

She described the area as a wildlife refuge and was surprised to see that the animals in the area were not particularly

BHS flag football jamboree to benefit Hancock Food Pantry

Bay High School's Student Council will host an all-girl football jamboree on November 9 at J. D. McCullough Stadium. The activity will benefit the local food pantry. According to council president Cody Thomas, "We have prepared food baskets in the past, and found participation to be very low, so we decided to promote an activity that would give the student body a more active role."

Anticipation of the game is running high among students, parents and area merchants, according to Thomas.

The Bay High band will perform at half time. The newly formed Tiger Paws will debut. The all-male cheerleaders will provide side line entertainment.

Several area merchants are sponsoring the teams for this event. Southern Printing of Pass Christian, Kmart and Wal-Mart in Waveland, and Peter's Weiners all contributed to the preparations for the games.

In game one, the Burger King Pantherettes (10th grade) will play the Pizza Hut Lionettes (9th grade).

In game two, the Domino Piza Tigerettes (12th grade) play the McDonald Cougarettes (11th grade).

The third game will be a play-off for the championship.

Everyone is guaranteed a good time, and the proceeds will go toward a worthy cause—to feed those in need. The Student Council additionally plans to make a donation to the survivors of Hurricane Hugo and the San Francisco Earthquake.

Principal Roger James stated, "The game is a fine activity, and we thank all merchants and parents who helped the students to plan and execute the activity."

SPECIAL PROGRAM

The Bay-Waveland Garden Club will be presenting a special program Thursday, Nov. 16 at 1 p.m. at the Center. There will be a demonstration of Thanksgiving and Christmas floral arrangements that seniors, or anyone else, can easily make for the home for the holidays.

We appreciate the garden club for its continued interest in the center. They have donated the beautiful hanging plants in our cafeteria this year and have plans to continue to make life a little brighter for our shut-ins. We will tell you about this later.

Come all you interested folks and participate in this special affair. Thank you Pat Schott and Olga Skelton for scheduling this event for us.

THANKSGIVING PARTY
Arlene Johnson has another party planned for this month.

We will be having a movie, pie and coffee from noon to 2 p.m. in our cafeteria. The date for this event is Friday Nov. 17. You know when Arlene plans something, it will be fun. So come and join us, and you just might win a prize!

COMING EVENTS

Friday, Dec. 8 is Christmas Bazaar and tea. We will be displaying work done by our seniors with some items for sale. We will also have some tea and punch in the afternoon to kick off the season. You can be sure Arlene and Tee Oliver will have other interesting additions to this event.

Wednesday, Dec. 20, is the Christmas party luncheon. This annual event is sponsored by our wonderful friends, the American Legion Post 139. The legion provides the food and the ladies serve the lunch to our participants and RSVP.

We will have entertainment and prizes and lots of fun. Please put this date on your calendar as I know you will be busy next month and we want to get on the calendar first!

HOLIDAYS

The Center will be closed Thanksgiving and the day after. Meals-on-wheels folks will receive two cold packs with their Thanksgiving dinner on the Wednesday before Thanksgiving.

We will also be closed Christmas day and the day after. Vote Tuesday!

HMC to sponsor baby-sitting clinic

With the holidays just around the corner, it's time for most teens to start thinking of earning some extra Christmas money. One way to earn a few extra dollars and have fun is baby-sitting.

Whether sitting for children in the neighborhood or brothers and sisters at home, it always helps to know the basics and become as qualified as possible. And with the proper education a not-so-hot sitter can become a super sitter—practically overnight.

Hancock Medical Center will host "The Super Sitter: A Baby-sitting Clinic for Teenagers" on Saturday, Nov. 11 from 9:30 to 11 a.m. at the hospital in Bay St. Louis.

The free workshop will consist of four rotating stations: What to do in case of an emergency, "dos and don'ts" for feeding children, how to handle discipline problems when baby-sitting a child, and tips on basic baby care.

In addition, there will be a question/answer period to discuss specific problems common for most baby-sitters. Participants will receive a Certificate of Achievement, and refreshments will be served.

Reservations are required as space is limited. For reservations, call Hancock Medical Center at 467-9081 ext. 2180 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday or 467-7755 in the evenings.

Julie Mabus is honorary ACS smokeout chairman

Mississippi's first lady Julie Mabus is the state's honorary chairman for the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout, according to Betty Lou Jones of Meridian, public information director of the Mississippi Division of the American Cancer Society.

The American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout turns 13 this year, which could bring good fortune to those smokers trying to quit. As it does each year on Smokeout Day, the American Cancer Society will encourage all smokers to try their luck in remaining smoke-free for 24 hours—in the hope that they might quit for life.

"You should be a quitter, that is if you smoke cigarettes" is part of the message in the state television spots featuring Julie Mabus. A strong supporter of the fight against cancer and an advocate of a smoke-free environment, Mrs. Mabus instated and has always adhered to a "no smoking" policy in the Mansion.

Nationally, last year's Smokeout proved to be the magic charm for approximately 10.7 percent of the nation's smokers, or 5.4 million people, who gave up cigarettes the entire 24 hours. One to three days later, 3.4 million of those people still were not smoking.

Each year on the third Thursday of November, the American Cancer Society celebrates the Great American Smokeout with rallies, races, athletic events, contests, and more.

Recently retired Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, MD, one of the most vocal opponents of smoking, has signed on with the American Cancer Society to sound the alarm against smoking.

If you smoke, take the challenge and try to "leave the pack behind" on Nov. 16. If you don't smoke, support a friend who does and encourage them to join the Great American Smokeout.

For more information, contact the Mississippi Division of the American Cancer Society at

DRY CLEAN HAZARD

An Environmental Protection Agency-Consumer Safety Commission draft document on "Understanding Indoor Air Pollution" recently cited perchloroethylene (perc) vapors left in dry-cleaned fabrics as one of the sources of concern.

Officials said research showed noticeable increases in perc levels after dry-cleaned clothes were brought into the home. Industry representatives questioned the date at a meeting in Washington, and a task force representing various interested parties was formed to arrange further studies.

It was noted that if odor remains in dry-cleaned garments, it is due to inadequate drying or poor solvent maintenance. It was further noted that there is no reason for either of these situations to occur, and garments with an odor should not be accepted by customers.

RAYON GARMENTS

This season there is an abundance of 100 percent rayon and rayon blend garments on the ready-to-wear market. Garments made of rayon can create care problems.

Some of the problems that may occur include color loss from water, shading and streaking from sizing, water staining, loss of body—limpness or loss of luster and sheen.

If rayon or rayon blend fabrics to perform satisfactorily when the recommended care instructions are followed, return the garment to the retailer for a no-charge adjustment.

FABRIC SOFTENERS

There are two types of fabric softeners: those added to the washer and those added to the dryer. Use softeners to soften and fluff, reduce static cling, reduce wrinkling and to add a fresh fragrance to fabrics.

Add washer fabric softeners during the wash cycle or the rinse cycle, depending on the product.

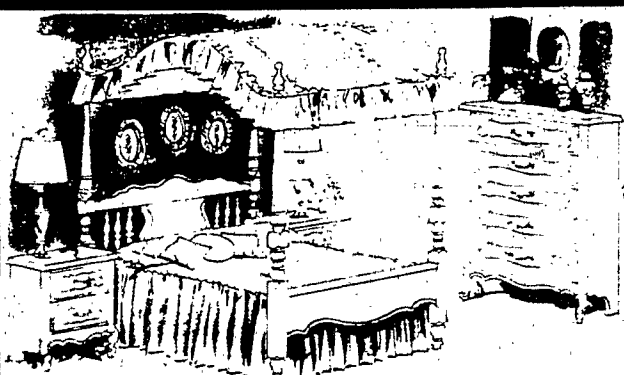

Dilute the softener first and do not pour it directly on fabric because staining may occur. If too much softener is used, fabrics will feel greasy, may discolor and are less absorbent.

Dryer-added fabric softeners come in liquid sprays, fabric sheets, foam sheets, pads or packets that attach to inside the dryer. Sometimes grease-like spots appear on some synthetics from dryer softeners. If this happens, wash the garment again.

Time to plant fall color

By Dr. Milo Burnham

Some gardeners are likely to think color in the yard and garden is limited to chrysanthemums, flowering annuals and leaves with fall coloring. Certainly, this is the time when chrysanthemums are at their best, and they provide spots of color as single plants or masses of color. The vast array of mum colors, sizes and types can provide abundant fall color without making the garden look monotonous.

in Mississippi
Gardens

Most flowering annuals such as marigolds, zinnias, periwinkle and salvia, though still providing color in the garden, are long past their prime. Begonias still look good and so do some plantings of impatiens that have revived with the cool nights.

In addition to these herbaceous flowering plants, there are some woody plants that also burst into flower as the days shorten and the temperatures drop. One of my favorite fall blooming shrubs is Camellia sasanqua.

Sasanqua camellias differ quite a bit from their more popular relatives, the standard camellias that bloom in late winter and early spring. Sasanquas have smaller leaves but larger, hardier plants and the smaller blooms are no less attractive and appealing.

Sasanqua blooms may have a single row of petals surrounding a cluster of bright yellow stamens. In the Yule Tide variety, the single row of petals are bright red and make a striking contrast with the mass of yellow stamens. The blooms of White Snow and Pink Snow have many petals and yellow stamens are not as obvious.

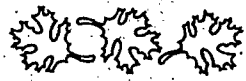

Visit your local nursery or garden center for a selection of Sasanqua camellias while well as for hedges and screening on large properties. The shrub does well in full sun or light shade and shows some drought tolerance. There are several varieties available at nurseries and garden centers.

Another landscape plant that may begin blooming over the next several weeks is Japanese Fatsia. Grown for their large dramatic leaves, established fatsia plants flower during mild winters.

Not truly hardy, the plant is sensitive to hard freezes and may be killed to the ground. In late fall and during mild winters, ball-shaped clusters of white flowers burst forth and on warm days attract bees.

I haven't noticed as many loquat trees lately as I once saw, so perhaps the population of this cold sensitive, small tree/ large shrub has been reduced by previous severe winters.

Loquat is a fall bloomer, and while the flowers aren't showy, they are fragrant. The developing edible fruit are frequently killed by winter temperatures.

I don't recall ever finding ripe fruit in spring in north Mississippi but have seen them in south Mississippi. The ripe flesh of the yellow fruit is edible, but the seeds are poisonous.

These plants are just a few of the plants that can bring color and fragrance to your yard in the fall. Visit your local nursery or garden center for a broader selection of plants. Remember, fall is for planting!

Genesis System, USM collaborate on marine vessel instrument display

A Mississippi Gulf Coast concern and an educator in the School of Engineering Technology at the University of Southern Mississippi have joined forces to develop custom instrument displays for commercial marine vessels.

Genesis System Inc. of Bay St. Louis and USM Associate Professor Dr. Allen E. Leybourne have entered into a collaborative effort to outfit river and ocean-going marine vessels with the latest in computer graphic applications.

"The on-board computers, which gather and store information such as engine power and vessel speed, presently display data in numeric form," said Genesis President Walter Todd. "In the future, we will use computer graphics in keeping with developments in aviation and the automotive industry."

Dr. Leybourne USM graduate student Miguel Rivas and Genesis engineer David Reynolds will work to adapt a method developed at USM to economically produce the graphic displays of vessel systems and conditions requested by Genesis' clients.

"An iconic (symbolic) graphics library will be developed, which can be used for customized display of navigational and other instrumentation results," said Leybourne.

"These symbols will be manipulated as objects, with customization of the displays available through a high-level computer interface," he added.

According to Reynolds, Genesis was founded some eight years ago, in response to pressure from increased fuel costs, to provide improved on-board energy resource management. Marine vessels, he said, unlike aircraft and land vehicles, vary widely and require customized displays, which are subject to revision after installation.

"Individual preferences of captains still influence what equipment and instruments appear in the pilot house," he said.

Leybourne said the collaborative effort promises to pave the way toward lower costs and speedier production of custom graphics.

"This initial demonstration project could open the door for a wide variety of object-oriented, customized computer graphics display systems, and will be the first program of its type at USM," he said.

Information on the Genesis System is available by contacting Genesis System Inc., Dept. P, 295 Highway 90, Suite 13, Bay St. Louis, MS 39520, or by calling 467-1214.

MultiVision offers educational programs

MultiVision Cable TV announced participation in the nationwide Cable Alliance for Education School Partnership Program, which is a long term commitment to provide high quality educational programs, commercial free, to students in the Waveland area public schools and to provide the use of cable television system resources in the educational process.

The multi-million dollar School Partnership Program was made public Sept. 29 in New York City by the Cable Alliance for Education.

MultiVision Cable TV will work with local school system administrators and educators to coordinate access to educational programming and supporting materials. MultiVision also airs the commercial free programming as part of their basic cable television service and will let subscribers know when the programming is cablecast.

Parents will then have the opportunity to videotape the educational programs, watch them with their children and possibly maintain a video reference library at home.

"We are very proud to be able to participate in this nationwide program," stated Wendy Harden, MultiVision Cable TV's mobile assistant marketing director. "This is an excellent example of how cable television operators and programming networks can work with educators for the good of the community."

MultiVision Cable TV provides cable television service to more than 70,000 subscribers along the Gulf Coast.
